December 3rd – Chapter 5 The Lord's Prayer

All kinds of things rejoiced my soul in their company - to talk and laugh, and to do other kindnesses; to read pleasant books together; to pass from lightest jesting to talk of the deepest things and back again; to differ without rancor, as persons might differ with themselves, and when most rarely dissension arose, to find our normal agreement all the sweeter for it; to teach each other and to learn from each other. These and such things kindled a flame that fused our very souls together and made us one out of many. Confession of St. Augustine 4,8
